Fidelity National Bank Announces New "Silver Center"

Fidelity National Bank has been selected to participate in the special "Silver Center" program sponsored nationally by The Franklin Mint, it was announced today by Lewis B. Goode, Jr., president of the Bank.

The Silver Center, now on display in the lobby of the bank's main office, features a variety of coins and other collector's items struck by The Franklin Mint, which is the world's largest private mint. "We are pleased to have been selected to participate in this program," said Mr. Goode, noting that only a limited number of Silver Centers will be authorized by the mint. When you consider that there are more than 30,000 banking locations in the country, it's quite an honor," he said. I think our customers will find the new Silver Center an intriguing addition--it's a little like having our own mint."

The Fidelity National Bank's Silver Center is featuring the famous Pistrucci "Waterloo Medal", considered by many experts to be the most beautiful medal ever produced. Benedetto Pistrucci, who was the chief sculptor of the Royal Mint in London, spent more than 33 years creating this magnificent design to commemorate Lord Wellington's 1815 victory of Nepoleon at Waterloo. When it was completed, the dies were considered too valuable to harden and strike and more than 100 years went by before The Franklin Mint's London affiliate, John Pinches Medallists, Ltd., received permission to copy the die and strike a slightly smaller version of the famous medal.

The Franklin Mint, headquartered in Franklin Center, Pennsylvania, is known worldwide for its Proof-quality coins, medals, ingots and sterling silver collector plates. It is considered to be the World's most advanced private minting organization.

The Franklin Mint is the only private mint in the United States that produces official coin-of-the-realm for the monetary authorities of other governments.

The Fidelity National Bank's Silver Center will also feature The American Heritage Medallic Treasury of American History. This breathtaking collection of 20 solid sterling silver art medals depicting the milestones in our country's history is available in limited edition.

These Silver Center orders are handled on a direct mail basis. Each item displayed has its own discriptive literature and order form. Reply envelopes are available for postage-free ordering from the Franklin Mint.

FOOD SHOPPER

It's time to brush up on your beef buymanship so you can take advantage of the large beef supplies. Beef cuts are now being displayed with attractive price tag.

On your way to the meat counter consider the quality grade and the cut which will fit the meal. Different cuts vary in tenderness. For any one cut, the higher the U.S. Department of Agriculture (U.S.D.A.) grade, the more tender, juicy and flavorful the meat will be.

Meat grades are a guide to quality; they're stamped on the meat. The order of grades for beef cuts is: prime, choice, good, standard and commercial. Of course, the grade preferred by consumers is U.S.D.A. Choice.

Each grade differs in characteristics. Prime grade is the ultimate in tenderness, juiciness and flavor. It has abundant marbling (flecks of fat within the lean) which enhances the flavor and juiciness. Many people look at prime meat and reject it beacause of the marbling. Remember, this marbling helps give the meat that juicy flavor and tenderness. This is the grade that many restaurants buy.

Choice grade is quite tender, juicy and flavorful. It is slightly less marbled than prime, but still of very high quality. It is produced in such a large amount that it often is a very good buy.

Good grade pleases lots of thrifty consumers. It's relatively tender, but lacks some of the juicy flavor of higher grades because of less marbling. This grade appears somewhat more lean due to mess marbling, so don't let this mislead you into thinking it's of higher quality.

When picking out the cut remember that any cut of beef makes good eating just so it's cooked properly. Tender cuts, such as rib steaks and loin cuts of higher grades should be cooked with dry heat-roasting in the oven, broiling, or panfrying. Use moist heat pot-roasting, or braising forless tender cuts such as arm chuck roast or brisket.

Other items to be considered when purchasing meat are: the number of people to be served, cooking time required, cooking equiptment needed, budget expenditure and consideration of the many kinds of cuts available.

Hopefully the above pointers will help you become a more informed shopper while you satisfy your family's hunger.
